

CHAMPIONING YOUR RIGHTS IN THE WORKPLACE

Whittles has been representing Trade Unions and their members for over 75 years, and is one of the UK's leading personal injury and employment law specialists.

Dedicated solicitors advise NACO members on all areas of trade union law, including accidents at work, industrial diseases and ongoing work-related conditions, breaches of contract and statutory duty, human rights legislation and tribunal claims. Whittles provides a half-hour, free of charge legal consultation to both members and their families. In addition NACO members have access to Whittles conveyancing and will writing services.

Whittles is justifiably proud of its reputation as a champion of employment rights, and its approach to its clients is founded on its core values of personal integrity and commitment.

Whittles delivers a legal service second to none including:

- access to large multi-disciplinary teams of legal and support staff;
- a set of market-leading operating procedures, determined by the firm's core standards and values of ethical working;
- a full one-stop shop of legal expertise;
- a culture where members' needs are paramount.

Strong personal relationships exist between Whittles staff, and both NACO officials and members – the hallmark of Whittles' dealings with all its clients.

If you feel you are being treated unfairly at work, or would like more information on Whittles services, contact your NACO representative or phone Alan Denham at our Manchester office on 0161 228 2061 for an initial, confidential discussion.
